The Harber of Sevantopol-The Malakoff—
The Rains of the War,
A foreign correspondent of the Philadelphia Evening Bulletin writes thus in a We visited a camp of wandering Tartars.

recent letter:

The harbor of Sevastopol is much like the Golden Horn—an arm of the sea, a mile wide, running up a mile or two, between high unwooded banks. It is one of those places destined, one would think, for a great city, and which will come some day. Russia made it as it was, as a threat and point of departure against Turkey; and bitterly has she paid for it. Driving off, in true Russian style, between long stretches of once splendid houses, halls, and temples, all ruined and fallen open to the sky, crossed ever by other streets in the same condition—a ruin so complete that Pompeli itself scens no more a city of the dead than does Sevastopol—we arrived at the ruins of the docks, which are now grass—grown, every vestige of masonry having disappeared. It is hard to imagine how such immense masses could have been destroyed, even with the use of guspowder. Of Fort Alexander, opposite Constantine, not a vestige remains. The walls inclusing these docks are still standing, yet pierced everywhere by cannon balls and defaced by grape. Sevastopol is fearful in its desolation.

We then rode to the cemetery of the English and the hill of Mahkod. The whole ground around is plowed by shot and shell; the tower, a pile of ruins. Many men are yet employed—four years after—in gathering the masses of iron—the poor harses of the bloody sowers—and the work is not yet done. This hill, the highest near the town, and whose possession caused the instant retreat of the Russians, is not much higher or more commanding than the others, and it is no wonder the Affies—not near it—gree so ecent letter: The harbor of Sevastopol is much like th treat of the Russians, is not much algher or more commanding than the others, and it is no wonder the Allies—not near it—were so long in finding it to be the key of the position. I gathered grape and Minie balls, and for ages will every upturned turf tell this story of almost superhuman courage and devotion. The cemeteries are in good order, yet the frosts of spring have already done much to remove the memorials of those gallant fellows who laid down their lives there. Thence around to the Fourth Russian Bation, where we saw mines made by Todleben, and countermines by the French. The terrible artillery of the French were here advanced to less than one hundred yards of the Russians! Of course nothing buman could stand such a fire; but the fall of the Malakoff made it at once untenable, and the Russians made their glorious retreat—perhaps the most glorious in history. I saw here rocks which had been thrown up by these enormous mines. The macritude of these their glorious retreat—perhaps the most glorious in history. I saw here rocks which had been thrown up by these enormous mines. The magnitude of these operations here is almost overpowering. How was it possible for the French ever to get so near, with such murderous artillery, in the face of unlimited number and skill on the part of the Russians. We saw the field of inkermann, "a near thing," as every Englishman says, and rode around by the English quarters, marked by the ruins of huts, by a road running in a picturesque ravine with rocky sides, pierced in ages far remote with graves. Then returning, with our minds filled with these pictures of desolation, it needed not another view of this dead city, of its roofiess walls and fallen structures, to realize the total destruction of Sevastopol.

GRAND AMPHITHRATER OF SNOWY HILLS .letter dated at Sukum Kale, in Circassia contains this description:

truction of Sevastopol.

This harbor is amid an amphitheater of snowy monutains, such as can not be seen in all Switzerland. Elbrons, one hundred miles off, is conspicuous. It is near eighteen thousand feet high, and has many compeers. All along, as far as the eye can distinguish, these snowy giants extend on the left, we face the bottom of this roadstead, and all along the right, for many a league, stretches another chain alike in grandeur. This is the most wonderful point of view on the sea level that can be conceived of. The shores are low, but the hills rise very soon, and are followed by range upon range, till the high mountains, forming the greater part of the back ground, rise up darkly in the distance, till the eye meets the line of the snow, sparkling and gleaming in the morning sun. This harbor is amid an amphitheater of gleaming in the morning sun.

During a recent severe shower a man was walking down Broadway, in New York, sheltering himself under a large family umbrella, when a young dandy, well-known in fashionable circles, thought to improve the opportunity. He burriedly accosted the stranger, inquiring for his health, family, &c., and proceeded to narrate an adventure of his. By the time he had concluded the story he had arrived at his place of destination, when bidding good day he left the owner of the umbrella to conjecture who had presumed upon his acquaintance. The young man was congratulating hipself upon having escaped a wetting by his address, when he found his watch missing. He speedily looked up a police detective, and learned upon describing the man upon whom he had been practicing his assurance, that he was a well-known pickpocket, whose portrait has graced the Rogue's Gallery for two years.

LOUIS NAPOLEON A RELATIVE OF THE SULTAN OF TURKEY.—A Paris correspondent says Louis Napoleon is of kin to the present Sultan of Turkey, he is a grandson of Josephine Tascher de la Pagerie, who married a De Beanharnais and afterward the Bonaparte. De Beauharnais and afterward the Bonaparte. One of her companions and very near kinswomen, was a girl two years younger than herself, (Josephine was born in 1764, her companion was born in 1766,) named M lie Aimee Dubue de Rivery. This young lady's fortune carried her to Constantinople, where she became the favorite of the reigning Sultan, and the present Sultan of Turkey is her grandson! The island of Martinique, has consequently given to Europe three female sovereigns—the Sultaness Valida, (M'lle Aimee Dubue de Rivery,) the Empress Josephine, (M'lle Tascher de la Pagerie,) and the wife of Louis XIV, M'me de Maintenon.

THE HORRORS OF ENGLISH PAUPER LIPS-THE HORRORS OF ENGLISH PAUPER LIFE—A MAN SCALDED TO DEATH.—The horrors of an English papper's life may be imagined from an item in an English paper which states that Richard Manning, aged sixty-two years, a lunatic pauper in the Work-house of St. Maithew's, Bethnal Green, was taken to the bath-room and placed in the bath, which was scalding hot. He screamed, and when dragged out was scalded over the whole surface of the body and in a shocking state of suffering. Medical assistance was immediately rendered, but Manning gradually sank and died.

Wife Desertion and Widow Ecopement. A report is in circulation in Aubero, N. Y., that a gentleman of that city, hitherto respectable, has eloped with an attractive widow, with whom he was on intimate terms. The gentleman left about two weeks ago for New York, but all inquiries there have failed to discover his whereabouts. The handsome widow left town about the same time. The gentleman deserted an interesting and amiable wife.

"OLD Book" DEFENDING HIMSELF.—It is reported that the President is preparing a document, which will be sent to the country, "showing up the objects and intentions of the whole pack of maligners who have en-deavored covertly to injure and defeat his Administration."

An Unparnosable Sin in a Servant.

"Why did you leave your last place?" inquired a housekeeper, about to engage a servant. "Why, you see, ma'am," replied the applicant, "I wan too good looking, and when I opened the door the folks took me for the missus and missus for me."

A correspondent thus writes from the east coast of the Black Sea:

We visited a camp of wandering Tartars near—true nomades of the plains. Many of the women were engaged in cooking doughnuts, which looked very good, but, from some small experience in such matters, I declined tasting them. As the wind always blows on the plains the live on, they dig a wedge-shaped hole in the ground to build a fire in; putting the pot in the little end, always to leeward, that the flames and smoke may blow against it. The men wear a sheep-skin uniform, consisting of hat, (wool out,) coat and paats, (wool in,) generally a long poinard or pistols in the belt. Water is always scarce with these people, and they grow very economical in the use of it. I saw quite a good-looking girl (making very heavy allowances looking girl (making very heavy allowances for dirt and dress) washing her whole abundant head of hair in a bowl that did not hold a pint. Their miserable wagons run on wheels without tires, and often in pieces.

The dirt of these gentry, living as they do on the open plain, is a strong feature, and you piece to be every different to the common to the open plain, is a strong feature, and you piece to be every different to be deep of their camp at your peril. Two bodies of men were arranged in two long lines, each with a priest before them, gaing through their orisons. Each man sat upon a sheep-skin, and followed the chant and prostrations of the leader. I could not lind out their religion, people say they are Mehammedans, but I doubt it. Yet they worship in a beautiful temple—a green-sward, plentifully sprinkled with flowers, this lovely May-day, extending, sloping down to the bay; on the right the rolling hills stretched around till the furthest promontory ran out into the sea in a line with the waters of Azof, which met the horizon; beyond, on the far side, other rolling, treeless hills, on which were thinly sprinkled the houses; before the blue waters of the Strait and the little city, with its squares and places, and little city, with its squares and places, and many striking buildings, rising gradually to the commanding hight on their left, on which stood an old and ruined church and

It is a minute record of charges for copper, lead, tin, &c., used in making the figures that adorned the pedestal of the statue of Ceres. It gives also the price of labor expended on the figures, and the expenditures for lead and timber used in building the platform or steps for raising within the temple the great pedestal, which was constructed of atones fastened together with clamps. It contains also a memorandum of expenses for setting up two statues upon this pedestal, and of the method of elevating such massive bodies, and fastening them to the base. THE NEW SYSTEM OF CHECKS ON RAILROADS The New System of Cuecks or Railroade. A new system of tickets has been adopted upon one of two railroads, which is designed to facilitate the settlement of accounts with the several station agents. Every ticket is numbered, commencing with "0" and going up to "1,000,000," and then commencing at "0, A" and increasing again. By this arrangement the number of tickets sold from any given station may be ascertained at any moment, without reckoning. The last ticket sold denotes the number. The tickets of each station are numbered separately.

CONNUBIAL EFFECT OF PROPERTY,-For th Convenial Effect of Property.—For the benefit of the census takers, it is proposed that each head of a family make out a list of the value of the property he may own, and give it to his wife, that she may be able to answer the census man's questions in his absence. This plan is open to one serious objection. If every woman knew precisely what her husband was worth there would be a great depreciation in conjugal affection throughout the land.

SINGULAR AND FATAL CAMPHENE LAMP EXPLOSION.—The little daughter of Frederick Hull, in New London, Conn., while return-ing home from a store with some burning fluid, came across some children who were amusing themselves with a bonfire, and stopped to join them. By some unknown means the fire communicated to the fluid in the can, and an explosion followed by which the little girl was so injured that she died in

THE DISINTERESTED MODERATION OF ENGLAND. The last advices from England have brought intelligence that Great Britain has accepted the sovereignty of the Fejec Islands, which was made to it a short time since. The same offer was made to the United States about three was made to the United States about three years ago and declined. The result is another proof of the disinterested moderation of Enland, and of the grasping propensity of the United States.

How to Passenva FLOWERS.-It is said that vases of flowers will retain their beauty and fragrance much longer if a little carbon-ate of soda is dissolved in the water in which they are placed. In this way flowers may be kept fresh and sweet for a fortnight.

THE FIRST ARRIVAL OF SUGAR FROM MEX-ICO.—A cargo of sugar, the first imported, was recently, received in New York, from Cam-peachy, Yucatan. It is pronounced a good, strong article, fully equal to the Cuban, in the hardness of its crystals, when refined.

Another Church Struck by Liberthia. The German Lutheran Church of Johnstown, Penu., was struck by lightning during avecent thunder storm. The electric fluid struck the alender spire which topped out the belify, shivering the former to fragments, and descending by the latter to the roof, where it tore a track through the shingles to the saves, thence descending by the spouting to the ground.

Decease of an Old English Journal-Interesting Remin senses.

The publication of one of the oldest newspapers printed in the English language is about to be discontinued. It is announced, mays the New York Evening Post, that the interest in the London Morning Chronicle was purchased some time since by the proprietor of the Morning Post. The Chronicle will be issued, as usual, until the first of August; after that date it will cease to appear. This intelligence will not surprise any one who is acquainted with the extraordinary progress made by the cheap press in Great Britain within the last few years. One could wish, however, that the Morning Chronicle had not been the first victim to this aggressive spirit of progress. There are associations connected with that journal of no little interest. It was in the Morning Chronicle that Sir Philip Francis—or somebody else—under a well-preserved incognito, gave to the world the "Junius Letters," the fame of which has not been confined to those countries where the English language is spoken.

These letters appeared in the Chronicle during the term of office of its first editor, Woodfall, who introduced into his paper the custom of regularly reporting the debates in Parliament, a new feature in English journalism at the time. Woodfall was considered "a recklessly brave person" for having given publicity to the ideas of Junius, Burke, Fox and Sheridan. Tom Moore, Campbell, Goldsmith, Byron and Dickens may also be numbered in the brilliant array of writers for "the good old Whig of the Strand." From Morgan McCarthy, the "joking genius," who imposed the famous "potato speech" on a drowsy brother chip as the genuine Parliamentary peroration of an indignant trishman smarting under his country's wrong to poor James Irwin, whose death occurred about a month since, the staff of the Chronicle was remarkable for its ability.

The Morning Chronicle was established in 1770, eighteen years before the Times. In noticing its procress an member to English was remarkable for its ability.

The Morning Chromicle was established in 1770, eighteen years before the Times. In noticing its progress, an eminent English author makes a statement to which we would noticing its progress, an eminent English author makes a statement to which we would respectfully ask the attention of those gentlemen who are continually instituting invidious comparisons between "the rough and ready journalism" of the United States and "the high-toned spirit of the British press." "The Chronicle," says the author of England Under the House of Hanorer, "like the Times, began its career in accordance with the taste of that age (1770), with courting popularity by detailing most indelicate private scandals, and with coarse libels on public as well as private characters." It would seem from this that the antecedents of our London cotemporaries are not so spotless as they would have us believe. But the Chronicle, when the only means by which it could then succeed had carried it to popularity and affluence, took a noble course. "There is more brilliancy in the Morning Chronicle than in the Times, without the formality and without the effort. The Times takes up no falling cause; fights no up-hill battle; advocates no great principle. It is ever strong upon the stronger side." These words were written by Hazlett sixty years ago.

A WOMAN CANVASSER IN IRELAND-SHI SINGS HER HUSBAND INTO OFFICE .- A COTTEspondent of the Waterford Mail gives the following anecdote of the late election for Clare:

Clare:

The contest turned wholly upon personal popularity, and Calcutt, who is a farmer-like, jolly Irish gentleman, was better calculated to win upon the people than the fashionable young captain of a crack corps. His wife, too, would make the fortune of any candidate. A line, dashing woman, she rode about the country in the carriage with her husband in his canvassing expeditions; and, when he was one day in a public house, seeing a parish committee, and she was outside in a barouche, awaiting his return, the frieze coats gathered round the vehicle, and giving three cheers "for her honor," called upon her to make a speech.

to "1,000,000," and then commencing at the property of the pro there was nothing incongruous about it; the lady sung her best, and entered into the spirit of her song, and the frieze coats list-ened entranced. From that moment forth, during the canvass, she never appeared in public without having to sing a song

A Brace of Conundames by Lord Palmeston.—The London correspondent of the New Orleans Delta says: "I told you in my last about Delaine, the editor of the Times, being received in so friendly a way by Palmerston, and that it has raised the ire of the Premier's foes. But His Lordship must have his bon mot at the expense of the affair; so the last thing in town attributed to Lord Palmerston is this conundrum: "Why are my dinners like Lady Palmerston's dresses? Because they are muzzling Delaine" (mousseline de laine), and so also his chop-fallen colleague, Ghadstone, who has got them all into a muss, is made the subject of conundrum number two: "Why is Ghadstone like lobster salad? Because he is very good, but disagrees with every body." A BRACE OF CONUNDRUMS BY LORD PALMER salad? Because he is very good, but disagrees with every body."

JAPANESE OBSERVATION OF THE SARBATH.
One of the Japanese doctors, Kas Assake, attended Dr. Chapin's Church on Sunday morning, and listened with much apparent interest to an eloquent sermon, in which frequent allusions to the Embassy were made.
During the day several of the Japanese visited Trinity Church, ascended into the spire, examined the bells, and took sketches of the scenery. Others went to Jones's Wood and to the Battery, or took rides up town.
Sunday was to them a day of recreation
rather than repose. JAPANESE OBSERVATION OF THE SARBATI

THE BELT EXCITEMENT IN ENGLAND.—A correspondent writes from London: "The belts were made by the greatest and most fashionable silversmiths in London, and were exable silversmiths in London, and were ex-hibited for two days, during which time an incessant stream of aristocratic ladies came to have a look at the trophies. Police had to be employed to keep the passage clear—and at last the belts were sent away in terror by the silversmith, who was afraid of losing some of his gems in the excitement which took place."

A BRAU'S CHIEF SORROW.—Beau Brummel once had his pocket picked. The pecuniary loss he bore with the greatest equanimity, but declared that he would hang, if he met with them, the ungentlemanly villains who, by neglecting to rebutton the pocket of his pantaloons, had caused him to walk the length of the street with his pocket turned inside-out. ANOTHER ACCIDENT TO A SCHNAMBULIST.

A NOTHER ACCIDENT TO A SCHAMBULIST.—
A somnambulic German, Joseph Geiger, walked out of a window of the North River Hotel, in Troy, N. Y., the other night. The window overlooked the river, and the unfortunate man striking on a projection of the dock, fell into the water. His outcries brought assistance, and he was rescued with only a leg broken. Responsibility of Notaries Public.—
Losses have occasionally been sustained by the oversight or neglect of Notaries in transmitting notices of protest. The Massachusetts Courts have decided that as a Notary is an officer of the State, the bank esculpying him is not liable to their customers for losses by negligence on his part. Another view is held by the New York Courts.

Political News Douglastics will not Unite on an Electoral Ticket. PHILADELPHIA, June 29.—For the Douglas ratification meeting in Independence-square, Saturday night, Reverdy Johnson, John Cochrane and Major Herran, of Louisiana, are promised certain, with other eminent speakers. Notwithstanding the briefness of the notice, an enthusiastic manifestation is enticipated.

anticipated,

It is stated on good authority that the Douglasites will refuse all overtures on the part of the Breckinridgers to unite on the Electoral ticket, and will demand an expart of the Breckinnigers to unite on the Electoral ticket, and will demand an expression of preference from the Electors appointed by the Reading Convention, and amend the list if necessary.

Detroit, Mich., June 28.—Most of the nominations at the Convention yesterday were made by acchamation. The proceedings were generally harmonious. It was announced that General Cass was in the city. A motion to invite him to attend the Convention was laid on the table. A subsequent motion to recall it was voted down by a decisive majority, as was a resolution indorsing the foreign and domestic policy of the present National Administration. Resolutions approving the nomination of Douglas and Johnson were enthusiastically passed.

Notwithstanding the rain, this evening, a ratification meeting, large and enthusiastic, is being addressed by several speakers, from different stands.

Portamouth, Va., June 29.—There was a great ratification meeting of the nomination of Breekingidee and Lang least night, it which Concone, Mass., June 28.—The Republican demonstration to-night, ratifying the nomination of Lincoln and Hamlin, is a grand and imposing affair, embracing a torch-light procession, illuminations, etc.

The mass meeting is held in the State-House-square, where addresses are being made by Hon. E. H. Robbins, Gen. Goodwin, Ex-Governor Colby and others. Altogether, it is one of the most enthusiastic demonstrations ever held in the States.

PORTLAND, Mr., June 28.—The Democratic Convention passed strong resolutions indorsing Douglas and non-intervention.

After their adjournment, a large Douglas ratification meeting was held, and addresses were made.

Balloon Ascension-Judge Douglas-The Great Eastern.
PHILADELPHIA, June 29.—Professor Lowe

ascended last evening in his mammoth bal-loon, and landed, at nine o'clock, in Medford, New Jersey.

Judge Douglas will arrive here on Sat-urday night, en route to New York, and will probably receive a screnade after the ratifica-tion meeting.

The North American recommends that the Great Eastern visit Philadelphia for a short time, if only to clear herself of barnacles in the fresh water of the Delaware. Mutiny on a Coolie Ship. Bosros, June 29.—The ship Kitty Simpson, from Macao for Havana, with three hundred and fifty coolies, put into Table Bay, May 3. Five coolies attempted to take the ship, but were driven below, one shot and several wounded. The ringleaders subsequently received from fifty to one hundred lashes, and were secured in irons.

River News.

Pryssums, June 29—M.—River thirty-five inches by the metal mark, and falling. Weather cloudy and warm.

MORMONS ON THEIR TRAVELS.—The other MORMONS ON THRIR TRAVELS.—The other morning some six hundred Mormons passed through Rochester, N. Y., on their way to Utah. They came up on the emigrant train, and occupied eleven coaches. Eight hundred came over on the vessel from Eugland. A railroad official says that one coach contained the elders and their concubines. He thinks they were quite a good-looking, intelligent party, and knew just about enough to rule over their deluded followers. They were quite adverse to talking, particularly to those outside of the "ring."

Similarity of the Neapolitans to Americas Slaves.—The Neapolitans, says Harriet Beecher Stowe, remind one of the plantation negroes of America, a merry, rollicking, ragged, careless set, to whom it is sufficient to lie in the sun and sing. They have such a passion for gay colors and musical sounds, and such a flaxibility of motion and sense of he danging and the singing element in nature.
